or all the challenges of the past two years, they have also been a time in which I've felt moved and inspired by the way the classical music world has drawn together as one - to support each other, to explore the exciting new ways today's technology can help reach audiences, and most of all to make music. From increased streaming to online concerts, many developments led by the needs of lockdown are today continuing to reach and grow the listeners of both today and, crucially, the future. At Gramophone, we are exploring and supporting these initiatives with great enthusiasm, and the diversity of ways we write and talk about music, whether in print, on our website or through our podcasts, offer ever greater opportunities to celebrate the finest artists of our age. One recent development has been the launch of our special collectors' editions, drawing together some of the most significant reviews and interviews from our almost century-long archive to explore the music of major composers. At the heart of all we do remains reviews, and the trust placed in us by our readers leads directly to them buying, listening and discovering recordings. Over the next few pages you can learn more about who they are, and how we can help you engage with them. If, after reading this, you have any questions, please don't hesitate to get in touch with me, with Gramophone's Commercial Manager Esther Zuke, or any of the Gramophone team, and we'll be delighted to help.
